Quarrel in the German Province: Immigrants between Musty Walls and the Fear of Deportation

German authorities make things difficult for asylum seekers: from the de facto abolition of the right of asylum, permanent fear of being deported back to poverty and dictatorship, systematic humiliation and isolation to placing them systematically in run down, isolated and musty buildings and camps, like Katzhütte and Blankenburg. This evening, an activist from the migrants organization Caravan presents some information about the situation of asylum seekers in the heim Katzhütte and their protest and resistance. After the presentation, everyone is invited to take part in the discussion about ways of resistance in refugee heims and camps.
